

May Life Skill On The Go | WORLD: Where Am I Going? Where Am I?

As a youth I was always looking forward. I wanted to be older so I could do the next cool thing. I wanted to be the popular eighth grader, senior in high school, and then college student. A mentor's goal is for their youth to have a bright successful future. This often leads to us dreaming about the future, but what can we do right now, today?

Today, you can support your mentee where they are, with open eyes and an open heart. Take time to understand your mentee. This month assess where you are in using a Positive Youth Development approach. Use the skills you learn from this article to better meet your mentee where they are at.

Read: http://www.mentoring.org/downloads/mentoring_382.pdf

Activity: Complete the simple activity on page 15. See how many of these principles you have already been carrying out.

If you have questions, please share them with your Mentor Specialist. They enjoy discussing this topic with you; including how to implement these principles in your mentoring relationship.

Take it deeper by clicking here to explore the other resources on this topic. If you know of a great resource or an activity that worked for your match, please share it with us so we can continue to improve the program.

Discussion with your Mentor Specialist

Take a few extra minutes this month and discuss this topic with your Mentor Specialist. They would enjoy talking with you about this topic including how to implement these principles in your mentoring relationship.